An Eccentric Nobleman.

Says the London Telegraph: One of the wealthiest and most eccentric noblemen in Europe, Prince Joseph Sulkowski, Duke of Bielitz, arrived at Copenhagen a few days ago, on his way to Norway, where he proposes to spend the winter in bear-hunting. He was accompanied by a numerous suite, consisting of a highly-salaried lady companion, a maitre de chapel, a reader, a body-surgeon, a valet de chambre, two running footmen, a mastiff, a huge orang-outang, two voluble parrots, and several cagefuls of singing-birds. One favorite member of his household, a Bengal tiger, he had been compelled to leave behind him at Hamburg, as the steamboat authorities respectfully but positively declined to convey that princely retainer across the seas. Prince Sulkowski's personal habits, as described in a letter from Copenhagen, are somewhat out of the common. He arises at 1 p.m., breakfasts an hour later, and listens to musical selections performed by the members of his household until seven. From seven to eight he takes a nap, which is followed by more chamber music until 1 a.m., his regular dinner hour. Having dined sumptuously, he sallies out on foot, accompanied by his secretary, and walks about the town until seven, when he returns to his hotel and goes to bed.

Noah Webster, remarks the Steuben Republican, was a celebrated author. He was a quick and ready writer, and in one of his inspired moments he dashed off a dictionary. He took it to several publishers, but they shied at it, saying the style was dull, turgid, dry, hard, and uninteresting, and beside that he used too many big words. But at last Noah succeeded, and the immortal work is in daily use, propping up babies at the dinner table.
